

Call for Applications: Early Career Nurses Ambassadors Group Membership

Dear Colleagues,

We are excited to announce the opening of applications for the EONS Early Career Nurses Ambassadors Group, a dynamic and collaborative team aimed at empowering and supporting the next generation of nursing professionals in cancer nursing nationally, at a European level and International. We are seeking passionate and dedicated early career nurses to join our working group and contribute to the advancement of cancer nursing practice, education, leadership, and research.

Aim is to have 2 representatives per country within Europe with no longer than 5 years' experience in oncology nursing at the moment of joining the Network.

About the Ambassadors Group:

The Early Career Nurses (ECN) Ambassadors Group of the European Oncology Nursing Society (EONS) is a group designed to foster collaboration, mentorship, and professional development among early career cancer nurses. Members will have the opportunity to engage in meaningful discussions, collaborate on innovative projects and shape the future of cancer nursing. By joining this group, you will become part of a vibrant community of like-minded professionals committed to making a difference in the field of cancer nursing. The EONS ECN ambassadors group is in alignment with EONS mission and Strategic Goals to support and improve the critical role that cancer nurses play in comprehensive cancer care and the professional development across Europe. The ECN Ambassadors shall have the mandate to assist the EONS Executive Board to meet its goals related to early career and young cancer nurses.

Membership of the ECN Ambassadors is reviewed by the ECN Chairs. The ECN WG co-chairs, members and the Executive Board work together to determine ECN Ambassadors needs and brainstorm new and potential tasks and members.

Description of Responsibilities:

The ECN Ambassadors group is expected to be knowledgeable of the issues and needs of early career cancer nurses and cancer patients in Europe. ECN Ambassadors are expected to provide advice on early career efforts and initiatives that can be taken up by EONS, and to provide feedback and reports on efforts undertaken by the society.

Early Career Nurses have less than 5 years of experience in the sector and play an important role in bringing innovative ideas, fresh perspectives, and new skillsets into the workforce. Tasks include, but are not limited to:

- Actively participate in group discussions, meetings, and collaborative projects.
- Contribute expertise and insights to support the group's initiatives.
- Engage in the group activities and knowledge sharing with fellow members.
- Collaborate on EONS projects, educational initiatives, and advocacy efforts related to nursing.
- Attend regular virtual meetings (the least is 50% per year) and occasional in-person events.
- Develop awareness of current issues and opportunities about early career and young cancer nurses for EONS to be represented.
- Build relationships with early career professional representatives of other healthcare organizations / societies.
- Participate in the development and implementation of the ECN Ambassadors work plan.
